“Come on, Rexy! Let’s play chase,” Olivia called to her puppy as she ran outside. Rexy wagged his tail and scampered out right behind her.
But Olivia couldn’t play with Rexy after all. She was suddenly so tired, she couldn’t run. She plopped down on a chair instead.

Olivia was at the hospital. She had a kind of cancer in her blood called leukemia. The doctors and nurses at the hospital were going to help her get better.
When Mommy arrived, she helped Olivia and Boo Bunny settle into their room. Olivia put on a sunny hospital gown, while Mommy unpacked her suitcase.

“I’m a little scared, Mommy,” Olivia whispered. “And I already miss Daniel and Rexy.”

Together Mommy and Olivia said their special rhyme: “Stars will twinkle, the sun will shine. I’ll be okay, I’ll be just fine.” Soon Olivia was feeling much better.

On the day Olivia came home from the hospital, Daniel and Nana were waiting on the front porch for her. When she stepped out of the car, they cheered and clapped and then rushed to scoop her up in the biggest of hugs. Rexy ran in circles all around them, barking and jumping until Olivia bent down to give him a belly rub.
Olivia went to her room with Boo Bunny to unpack, and Rexy tagged along. Daddy hung up her poster from the hospital, while Nana and Mommy warmed up chicken noodle soup and made her favorite grilled cheese sandwiches for lunch. Cupcakes with sprinkles for dessert were their happy-to-be-home treat.
For the next few days, Olivia stayed home and played indoors. It was too chilly and rainy for her to go outside.

Nana came over one afternoon for a tea party. She had even made tiny chocolate cookies for them to share.
